- 1) Allows DMV to waive the behind-the-wheel portion of the driver's license examination for a foreign national seeking a Class C license if it has found that he or she has an equivalent Class A, B or C driver's license from a country with a substantially similar driving examination to its own and that country has signed a memorandum of understanding that it will reciprocate the same benefit for California drivers.

 - b) Submit satisfactory proof of California residency;
 - c) Submit a notarized copy of the foreign driver's license and a five year driving record translated into English and notarized by the consulate general of the foreign nation within California; and,
 - d) Surrender their foreign driver's license to DMV.

COMMENTS:

Who Can Drive in California Without a California Driver's License? Americans from other states and foreign nationals are allowed to drive in California without a California driver's license if they are visiting the state and have a driver's license from their home state or country. California does not require visitors from a foreign nation to have an International Driver's Permit (IDP), also mistakenly referred to as an International Driver's License, in order to drive in the state of California. An IDP is a document that translates individual's driver's licenses into 19 different languages and is often required when visiting other countries.

Once someone becomes a resident of California, they are required to have a California driver's license in order to drive in this state. New residents from out-of-state are required to take the written examination on the rules of the road and pass a visual and hearing examination in order to obtain a California driver's license. They may have to take a behind-the-wheel portion of the driver's license exam, but that exam can be waived by DMV if the department verifies the applicant's driving record from another state, territory, or possession of the United States does not have any stops, holds, or other impediments on their license. A licensee must surrender their out-of-state license in order to receive their California driver's license.

Foreign nationals, regardless of their country of origin, are required to take both the written and behind-the-wheel portion of the exam to obtain a California driver's license.

Protecting Public Safety: This bill takes several steps to protect public safety. While it allows foreign nationals to have the driving portion of DMV's exam waived, they must still pass the written exam and take the visual and hearing examination.

Further, a foreign country's residents will only be able to have their driving examination waived if DMV has made a finding that the foreign countries driving examination is substantially similar to its own and that country has signed a memorandum of understanding that they will provide the same treatment for California licensees in their territories.

If the DMV has verified that the foreign nation has a substantially similar behind-the-wheel examination and a memorandum of understanding has been signed, DMV must then verify that there are no stops, holds, or other impediments to the issuance of an applicant's existing license before it can waive the behind-the-wheel examination. DMV must also receive a copy of the individuals driving record for the last five years, translated into English, and a copy of his or her license translated into English, and both must be notarized by the consulate general's office of the country of origin in California. In addition, while a driver from a foreign nation can submit a commercial or non-commercial Class A, B or C license to have their examination waived, they will only be able to receive a non-commercial Class C license. Finally, the licensee will have to surrender their existing driver's license to DMV for destruction.

By having five years' worth of driving records, DMV will be able to assess any equivalent negligent operator points onto the individual's license as if they had committed the driving offense in California. DMV also does this for drivers from other states who exchange their license for a California driver's license.
